Cookies

When you visit our websites the Trust will place a small file on your electronic device (computer, phone, or tablet etc) – this file is called a ‘Cookie’. This is a common practice that most websites that you visit will use.

Cookies are used so that:

- We can remember the information you’ve provided us with while on our website, so you don’t have to keep re-entering the information whenever you visit a new page.
- We can look at how you use our website so that we can improve it for other users.

When you use our websites you agree that we can put these cookies on your device.

The Trust do not use Cookies that also monitor other websites that you’ve visited (these are known as privacy intrusive cookies).

The Trust’s Cookies will not identify you but if you prefer you may wish to turn Cookies off.

For more information about how to this, and more information about Cookies in general, please see <https://www.aboutcookies.org/>
